

A NAVAL BATTLE GROUND.

Buoys to Mark the Positions of the Ships in the Mobile Struggle.

The greatest naval battle since Nelson's time was that of Mobile Bay. It has been proposed that the positions of the ships engaged should be marked with buoys, and this will doubtless be done before long. The bay is a great cemetery. Sunk in sixty feet of water is the Union monitor in which brave Captain Craven went down, a hole being knocked out of her bottom by a torpedo. A vessel of that kind does not sink slowly like a craft that is made of wood. Being a mass of iron, the moment the water flowed into her she went to the bottom as a stone would.

The only persons who had a chance to escape were her commander and the pilot, because they were in the turret. There was time for but one of them to get out by means of the ladder. The captain stood aside, saying, "After you, pilot," and the latter saved his own life, while the noble Craven sank with his crew in the huge metal coffin. Some years ago an attempt was made to raise the monitor, with its freight of dead heroes, but such a howl arose against the "desecration" that it was abandoned.

HE MIGHT HAVE FALLEN.

A Story of the President's Accident on the Onida.

NEW YORK, July 10.—The Mail and Express says: Reports were current down town to-day that Mr. Cleveland's indisposition, while it may be partly due to rheumatism, as stated in yesterday's dispatches from Buzzard's Bay, is also partly, at least, caused by an accident while on Mr. Benedict's yacht, the Onida. A well-known Wall street man, who should be thoroughly informed regarding Mr. Cleveland's present condition, said to a reporter: "The story came to me this morning that on the second or third day the yacht was out from New York Mr. Cleveland had left the dining cabin and unfortunately fell up or down the companionway. His head came in contact with the steps and with the brass trimmings. I am told that he received two or three ugly contusions a little above the temples, and that his face was so badly scraped in several places as to disfigure it."

"Mr. Cleveland is understood to have been undergoing a very strict diet for the purpose of reducing his flesh. There is reason to believe that he determined to abandon this regime and give his appetite full swing, at least during the few days he expected to be on the yacht. The conditions of the Onida are such that nearly, if not quite, as elaborate a dinner can be served on board as in any hotel in New York."

THE OMISH MENNONITES.

A Peculiar People in Illinois, Who Always Dress in Black.

In the township of Lowe, Moultrie county, Ill., there reside a class of people who, while they do not in the usual transaction of business differ from other people, in many respects are so different from the run of the human family that they attract much attention, more particularly from those who do not see them daily.

The settlement consists of 350 or more men, women and children, and from one of their number—David Mast—it is learned that this is the only body of this class of people—Omish Mennonites—in this State. The number in this settlement was formerly small, and originally came from Pennsylvania. They are of German descent, and among themselves talk a sort of German dialect of Pennsylvania Dutch.

The Omish Mennonite has for more than a century been a fixture in Pennsylvania. But there he has not so closely remained true to the established customs of his sect as have the members of the Illinois colony. The latter, the entire 350 of them, wear nothing in the shape of outer clothing that is not in color black, including among the men broad-brimmed black hats and among the women plain black calico dresses and black Shaker bonnets.

They are all American born, have two churches in the community and educate their children in the public schools of the village of Arthur and the township in which they live. The settlement is kept free from intrusion of blood other than that of the forefathers, because no member of any family is permitted to unite in marriage with any one outside the church to which all belong.—St. Louis Republic.

PROPELLED BY STORED STEAM.

A Test Made of the Kinetic Motor on a Chicago Car.

People on West Lake street yesterday afternoon saw a peculiar-looking street car going rapidly over the tracks as if propelled by magic where the jingle-jangle street-car horses have trotted for many years. This new car was moved by steam, but there was no noise of steam exhaust and no smoke or dust from a black smokestack. It is a recent addition to the many motors constructed for street railroad use, and is known as the Kinetic motor.

The Kinetic motor is constructed on the storage steam plan. It is stored with steam and hot water at headquarters sufficient to run the motor and trailer cars twenty miles. The steam is used over and over again, not escaping through an exhaust, but being re-enforced by a small fire of anthracite coal and the hot water the motor carries. It has been run through the tunnels, making the grades easily. It is claimed for it that the cost of running does not exceed two cents per car a mile. Then, too, each train with a motor is independent of all the others. If one is broken another takes it out of the way, avoiding the delay many times experienced on cable and electric roads.—Chicago Herald.

There are homes, probably in this land in which it is unknown, except by name, and there are numerous friends abroad to whom this publication would afford untold satisfaction for the kind of reliable information it imparts in its one hundred and fifty or more pages, with nothing of the "Guide Book" gush about it. Aim at the Drake

And you are bound to hit some of the ducks. This is precisely the same with

Wampole's

Tasteless

Preparation

OF

Cod Liver Oil.

It aims to cure Consumption, Hits the Mark, too, and it
most effectually breaks up Colds, Coughs, Hoarseness and all Throat and Lung troubles that cause this disease.

It is natural logic to conclude that if WAMPOLE'S PREPARATION OF COD LIVER OIL has power to prevent Consumption, it surely is able to cure these lesser emergencies.

This vigor-making, fat producing preparation is Absolutely Tasteless, in so far as Cod Liver Oil is concerned. All you notice is a delightful flavor of Wild Cherry and Anise.

But the purest Norwegian Cod Liver Oil is there all the same. It is a great blood enricher. Best of all it is a natural food that in its stomachic effects, actually assists its own assimilation.

In Pulmonary or Bronchial troubles it is unequalled. No one doubts the value of Cod Liver Oil, but not every one is able to take it.

WAMPOLE'S PREPARATION

removes the nauseous objection and actually makes Cod Liver Oil palatable.
